What About Social Credit in Canada?

This series is an explanation of the Douglas Social Credit Plan. Mr. Williams, (W.) a Social Credit advocate, is explaining the plan to his friend, Mr. Jones (J.) The scene is Mr. Williams' home, and the conversation takes place during an evening visit.

By following this series to the conclusion the reader will clearly understand the problem which faces Canada.

NUMBER 6.

W. "No, the banks do NOT own the financial credit which they lend. It is something which belongs to the community for it has no real value except what it derives from the Real Credit of the community."

J. "Say that again—slowly."

W. "I suppose it is in two terms, Financial credit and Real credit, that are confusing to you."

J. "Yes, what do you mean when you talk of Real Credit?"

W. "Now for the first time we are in the borders of the land of Social Credit. From now on you will be running into original ideas so don't let anything pass that looks doubtful. Real Credit has been defined as the 'belief in the capacity of society with all its resources to deliver goods and services at a certain rate.' Applying that to an individual unit it simply means that you look at a factory, its mechanical equipment, its personnel, accessibility to raw materials, etc. and from these factors you can estimate the capacity of that plant to turn out its product. Now, in this case you are dealing with Real Wealth for I suppose that you realize that our Real Wealth consists of goods and services and that money in any form is not Wealth. This other thing which I called Financial Credit is something quite different. It is only the shadow of the real thing and has no value in itself. At its best it would give a true image of this real credit I explained. Today it bears no relation to the community's Real Credit. Financial Credit may be defined as the belief in the capacity of the person or the community credited to deliver money, where, when, and as required. That means that when a banker makes a loan he has faith in the ability of the borrower to repay that loan at the time specified. It means that when a person buys bonds of a municipality the person believes that at the time for the retirement of the bond he will receive his original amount of money, and, of course, in addition, he expects to be receiving interest in the meantime according to the contract. Do you see how in both cases credit is just what the word means—a belief in certain contingencies. In the case of Real Credit it is concerned with things that are useful to man. In the case of Financial Credit it is concerned with paper and ink book-keeping, if you like, and which you can see is something that has no value in itself and would be useless but for the existence of other things."

J. "But it would be pretty hard to get along without money."

W. "Of course it would. But don't you see that it is useful only in the relation it bears to other things. For instance, remove the community and its Real Credit and what is your chance of surviving depends on Financial Credit worth? Suppose you are alone on a desert island where your chances of surviving depends upon your ability to construct a shelter and to obtain some form of food. Your welfare would be greatly enhanced by finding a keen axe, or even a stout blade-knife, but what good would it do you to find a hundred-weight of gold; what pleasure would you derive from finding a thick bundle of banknotes or what satisfaction would you have if you came across an endorsed cheque for fifty thousand dollars drawn on any Canadian Bank? Your only hope would lie in the chance of rescue and of your return to the community where these things could be exchanged for something of real value to you. Do you not see that the Financial Credit issued by banks is worthless unless the community is able to equate that amount with a quantity of Real Wealth in the form of goods?"

J. "I never thought of that before. You're certainly right in that. It is one thing that as far as I can see cannot be denied."

W. "Yes, and now do you see the relative importance of the banker's part and the part played by the community?"

J. "Say, Williams, now that you have mentioned it, it is amazing when you come to think about it."

The real work is done by the pioneers who open the country endure hardships and toil throughout their lives in order to reclaim the land from the wilderness. It is done by the farmers who till the soil and produce life preserving cereals; and other food products; by miners who brave the dangers in the depths of the earth in order to extract the necessary minerals; by fishermen who face the terrors of the sea to add another item to man's sustenance. Then too it is done by the workmen of all trades who transform raw materials into useful goods. It is done by women who make a home for man and care for the children who become the succeeding generation. It is done by thinkers, teachers, and ministers who seek to develop man's mentality, to broaden and refine culture, and to plant the seeds of spiritual life. It is done by doctors and nurses who strive to preserve the health of the individual, and by the other professions which minister to man's needs. Yes, and it is done even by the class which some men revile as 'capitalists' for if these plan, initiate, and direct huge undertakings which add to the real wealth of the country it is only fair to acknowledge their services. But what does the banker or financier do?"

W. "His real task is to administer the financial system, so that credit is issued and recalled in a manner which will facilitate all these other operations. At present, however, he thwarts the efforts of the rest of the community because he has come to regard the system which he is permitted to operate as a machine belonging to him which he can work for his own benefit. He is very much like a ticket agent of a railway who would treat the tickets as his own property merely because he handled them in the course of his work. The paradox is that these men, who operate a system that produces such havoc, may be, in private life, quite irreproachable citizens. They are generally among the highest probity and rectitude but they stubbornly refuse to admit that they are but the trustees of the Real Wealth of the community. Our inability to appreciate the effect of certain principles of cost accounting coupled with the bankers' refusal to administer the financial system except in accordance with his own rules—

THESE TWO THINGS ARE

Liberals Win First Playoff Game

Playing before a rather small house on the Collegiate floor in Lethbridge on Friday night last, the Jacks were let down on the short end of a 36-26 score, to drop the first game of the three-game playoff to the Young Liberals.

According to some of the local fans who witnessed the game, neither team was on, and the game, with the exception of a few spurts, lacked the pep and fire that most of the games between these two teams this season have caused. O'Brien, of the Jack forward line had an off night, and while he shot quite frequently, simply could not make a basket.

Early in the second half the Jacks shot into the lead for a minute or two when Kirkham, who had a dead eye on the hoop poked through a couple in swift succession, but Howard for the Liberals snatched a basket to put his team one up, and then the Liberals started bombarding the board so frequently, and with such deadly vengeance, that the gap gradually widened until the full time whistle found the score 36-26, with the Jacks still pressing hard for baskets, and the Liberals fighting hard to increase their lead.

They meet again tonight. Who will win? How we wish we knew.

HAWK AND KING WIN

Quite a number of local fans were in Calgary Wednesday night last, for the Provincial Boxing Eliminations held there, and witnessed 28 bouts, amongst which was Wayne Hawk, and Devar King, two local sluggers, who gave very good accounts of themselves, won their bouts and are headed now for the Provincial finals in Calgary on April 2nd and 3rd.

King won the decision over his man in the 110 lb. class.

Hawk won a decision, and a technical knockout over his two opponents in the 135 pound Nolvie class.

Wilford Tillack, of Stirling was also in the winners list taking the 147 lbs. Open.

Nearly 800 fans were present, paying $1.50 and $1.00 for their seats, and for those who went from here it took all night, as the first of them didn't get back until 6 a.m. But they all said it was well worth it all.

Concluding a successful winter's work, the Gleaner Girls of the Raymond 2nd Ward M. J. A. together with executives of the Association, and a number of the older people of the ward met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Evans recently, in what proved to be a most enjoyable evening. The girls were asked to wear old fashioned clothes, worn by their mothers or grandmothers, of fifty years ago, and some very quaint old costumes were in evidence.

Family keepsakes and historic bits of by gone days were also collected in one of the rooms, and among many other items, the following were on display: A bed spread, 50 years old; Cream pitcher, 5 generations old; glass dish and Paisley Shawl, 55 years old; Plate, 100 one of the first editions of the Book of Mormon; 2 of the first edition of Deseret News; Glass Tureen which was used in the first settlement service in Payson, Utah, 500 years old; Ear rings, 200 years old; Ring, 70 year old; Chest, 100 years old; Salt dish, 100; Razor 500 years; Pen and Ink Stand, 50.

Mothers of the Gleaners were present, and Geo. W. Clark, oldest or amongst the oldest men in Raymond; Mrs. Powelson, 86, the oldest lady, and the following special guests: Mrs. Harris mother of Mrs. J. H. Walker, Mr. and Mrs. Heber Coles; Mrs. Anderson, Mr. and Mrs. Erickson, Mrs. Shields, Mrs. Dyeon, Mrs. A. J. Walton, Stake Executive, Mrs. L. D. King, Chase Leader, and Mesdames M. T. King, J. H. Walker and B. R. Kenney, making a party of about 50.

An old-fashioned program included remarks by Mr. Clarke, Mrs. Powelson, Mrs. Harris; Duett, "Silver Threads; Among the Gold," Mr and Mrs. Erickson, Duett, "Tis But an Old-Fashioned Rosebud," Mesdames King and Walker, and a song by Mrs. Dyeon, and lunch consisted of Barley Coffee, Bread and Butter, Ginger Cake, Pop corn and Ice cream. Everyone voted the party a complete success.

T. Geo. Wood was in Edmonton the first of the week where he presided at the Convention of the Alberta Branch of the Canadian Manufacturers Association, of which body he is President.

RELIEF SOCIETIES OBSERVE ST. PATRICK'S DAY

More than 500 people attended the annual Relief Society party held at the Opera House here Saturday night celebrating the 91st anniversary of the organization.

Coming as it does on the 17 of March, St. Patrick's Day, this always well-attended function has a double significance and is keeping with such the decoration scheme was confined to Irish green and the shamrock of Ireland. Numerous paper shamrocks were pasted on walls and suspended in combination with other trimmings to create a St. Patrick's atmosphere.

An excellent program was given by local talent including a one-act play under the direction of Myron Holmes, Stake H. I. A. drama director.

The sponsors of Saturday evening's celebration here consisted of the presidency and officers of the two Raymond Wards and it is quite significant to observe that, not unlike other activities, success always attends their efforts. There are approximately 200 members in both organizations. Light refreshments were served and a dance concluded another annual Relief Society anniversary.

MORE AND BETTER STREETS

The example of many Raymond property owners during the past few months, in the matter of improving the roads and walks that pass their property is worthy of emulation by more citizens, and we believe will be emulated. This kind of work is like a boomerang, it not only benefits the people who travel over such walks and roads, it is not only a benefit to the town, but, when a property owner desires to dispose of his property for any cause, whatsoever, the fact of being on good walks and good roads, makes it easier to dispose of property, and makes a better price not only possible, but very probable.

The Mayor and Council have shown a very commendable spirit of co-operation in assisting in these improvements and have graded the road, and put in culverts where needed along such streets as have come in for surfacing, so that several blocks of almost impassable roads, during wet weather, have been brought practically to an all-weather condition with a minimum of expense to the town, and only a little ambition and labor on the part of the property owners. With almost every taxpayer howling about high taxes and water rates, it shows at least a good bit of common sense when people will exert themselves a little in a community project, as many have done this winter, instead of coming to the Council one day with a demand for lower taxes, and then coming back the next day asking for the expenditure of a few thousand dollars for better streets, etc.

If we would only consider for a moment, that the only means of revenue of the town is the taxes paid each year, and that whenever we undertake a civic project of any size, it means levying new taxes, or appropriating from funds budgeted for some other purpose, we may soon decide that the more we can do in the way of using up our spare time in such projects, the better we will be off as citizens, and the better the Town can cut our mill rate for taxation purposes. After all, the town is merely the expression of the view and desires of its citizens, and when we all go around with an axe to grind, we grind it, if perchance it is ground, at the expense of our neighbors and friends, and in the final analysis, it is a polite way of telling our fellow citizens that while we do not want to pay any more taxes, still we would like to increase the debt of the town so that they could pay more.

We are not advocating the "Golden Rule" or the abolition of the gold standard, but we are of the opinion that a little more co-operation for the common good would tend to the enlargement of soul and the brightening of conscience in respect to civic matters of all of us. At any rate, a few more efforts for better roads on the co-operative scheme, would give all of us a better understanding of civic problems, and a deeper appreciation of the efforts that our Councilmen, who spend so much time gratis, for the benefit of the citizens of the town, and take abuse and disgraceful talk from citizens in their duties as Councilmen, for which they would seek anyone else in the nose, and have good grounds for it too.

If we want better roads, etc., let us all get them by means of cinder drives, and other projects of a like nature.

Pres. H. S. Allen left last week to attend the April Conference in Salt Lake City.

The school kids are anxiously waiting now for Good Friday and Easter when they will have about a week's holiday.

CERTIFIED SEED POTATOES

Growers who have not yet secured their seed potatoes are advised to place their orders quickly to avoid disappointment. The Dominion Seed Potato Certification Service reports that the bulk of the seed crop was sold last year at little more than table stock prices and consequently there were two thousand acres less seed grown in 1933. The quality of the seed crop this season is very good. The premium is much higher and the demand is particularly good. The export shipments already exceed 1200 car lots as compared with 750 car lots at this time last year, and the loss in storage from frost injury has been much heavier this winter than usual, therefore, the supplies now available for home markets is the smallest in many years. Certified Irish Cobbler in particular will be scarce at planting time.

Purchasers should always demand to see the official tag issued by the Dominion Plant Disease Inspection Service. After all, the town is merely

Loaded with a large paper bag, full of sandwiches and fruit, five young Canadian "voyagers" are seen at Windsor Station, Montreal, where they more than enjoyed themselves while waiting for the train to take them to the Canadian Pacific liner Duchess of York and England. They are

Few youngsters of his age are ever called upon to chaperone four young sisters on a 5,000 mile journey, but Billy shouldered his responsibilities like a man. He was shepherd, guide and constant census-taker of his little flock. The children are going to live with their grand-parents at Turley, near London. Canadian Pacific representatives and the Traveler's All Society cared for them en route. On board the Duchess of York the little party was looked after by a n. party. The

A litter of ten lively, Yorkshire pigs arrived at the piggery the other day and in view of the wide interest there is at this time in bacon hogs, your writer undertook to obtain an account of the breeding of these potential mortgage lifters for this week's letter.

The sow herself is typical of the breeding stock used in the swine herd here at the Lethbridge Experimental Station in that she is a pure bred Yorkshire and in addition she has qualified for advanced registration in the performance test outlined in the Dominion Government Policy for swine improvement that was inaugurated in Canada in 1928. The purpose of this policy which is planned somewhat after the swine improvement work in Denmark and is organized on a national basis, is to provide swine breeders in Canada with the means for identifying the best sows and boars in their pure bred herds.

The particular sow we are writing about qualified in this performance test, by weaning, on October last, a litter of ten pigs, two more than required, that showed no disqualifying characters. Five of these pigs as required were nominated for the slaughter test. Four of these five succeeded in attaining a live weight of at least 200 pounds in 200 days and less and when slaughtered the carcasses scored high enough on rail to conform to the exacting specifications of the Old Country bacon trade.

Yorkshire are used at the Lethbridge Station because this breed is unquestionably the premier bacon breed and as one leading authority has stated there appears to be no doubt that this, the Yorkshire Breed, provides the surest means of attaining the production of a high percentage of select bacon hogs. The Tamworths have long been noted as producers of high quality bacon but this breed has the serious fault of producing carcasses that show a high percentage of seedy bellies. This is a dark discolouration of the meat along the belly that occurs only in red and black hogs and is evidently caused by the pigments that give colour to the hair of the hog. Pure white pigs never show seedy bellies.

The seriousness of this menace to our export bacon trade is strikingly indicated by an investigation conducted recently which showed that of the red or Tamworth gilts received at a Calgary packing plant during two weeks, 23 per cent had seedy bellies, and this situation is all the more serious so far as our bacon trade is concerned because the seedy belly can not be detected until the meat reaches the retailer in the Old Country and he starts to cut the Wiltshire side for his trade. The damage then is done so far as Canada's reputation for bacon is concerned.

The Tamworth hog has some outstanding merits that make it popular with many farmers and feeders. Its tendency to produce scaldy bellies, however, is a really serious handicap that just about puts this breed out of the running so far, at any rate as our export bacon trade is concerned. The Yorkshire breed on the other hand is a white breed that is entirely free from this objection and the Yorkshire it seems will need to be used extensively, if not entirely, in gaining and holding the British bacon trade.

Infection is a term which is used to describe the implantation of disease in the body from without. In this sense, the use of the term implies the communication or transfer of disease by a living agent or disease germ.

Disease germs are so small as to be invisible to the naked eye. Through the microscope, many of them can be seen and identified, but some of them are too small for even the most powerful microscope to magnify sufficiently to allow of their being seen.

Outside of the body, disease germs do no harm. They must first gain entrance to the body and this they do in one of three ways. They may be breathed in, or swallowed, or they may enter through a break in the skin. Because they are so minute, the break in the skin need only be of microscopic size to allow germs to penetrate.

As far as we know, disease germs do not grow and multiply in nature outside of the human or animal body. Some of them are hardier or more resistant than others, but they do, in general, die fairly quickly outside of the human or animal body. Like plants, germs require moisture to live; drying, especially in sunshine, destroys them. The important practical point is that, in most instances, disease germs are spread direct by the fresh or sun-dried secretions of the sick person.

There is danger in the use of articles recently soiled by secretions. The common drinking-cup is a real menace, because there is not time for the germs deposited in the saliva of one user to die before the cup is placed to the lips of another, and so the saliva of the first passes into the mouth of the second, carrying any disease germs.

Mrs. J. H. Reid was a bus passenger from Calgary to Cardston Monday evening, and stopped off to see her brother, S. I. May and family enroute.

The circulation staff of the Toronto Star were here last week, and according to Mr. Cope who handles the papers, states that they were well satisfied with results obtained from their work here.

Tickets for the Basketball game Friday night were nearly all spoken for before they could be put on sale Monday, and the executive had nearly 400 seats reserved, for this game.

Everyone who saw "Gold Diggers of 1933" were high in their praise of it as an entertainment of outstanding merit. The management of the Capitol deserves commendation for bringing such splendid pictures to local theatre goers.

which the saliva may have contained. Nevertheless, our real danger lies in the coughs, sneezes and loud talking which throw particles from the mouth and nose into the faces of those around.

If you want to appreciate this danger, stand in front of a clean mirror. Cough, sneeze and talk at the mirror; then observe the deposit of droplets on its surface. Try this standing at various distances and see how many feet you throw the droplets; in this way, you have a practical demonstration of what the uncovered sneeze and cough mean to those who come within the range of droplet fire.

When the germs gain entrance to our bodies and establish themselves, we become infected. When we begin to pass the germs out, we are infectious. The infectious person is to be avoided unless he takes the precautions necessary to protect others.

How many days of your life are lost in feeling under par? How many hours which might be bright are dull and disappointed?

Half-hearted days are frequently due to common constipation. It clouds your waking hours, takes the sunshine out of living. Yet it can be overcome so easily by eating a delicious cereal.

Laboratory tests show Kellogg's All-Bran provides "bulk" and vitamin B to aid elimination. All-Bran is also a fine source of iron.

The "bulk" in All-Bran is much like that in leafy vegetables. Isn't this "cereal way" pleasanter than risking potent medicines?

Two tablespoonfuls daily are usually sufficient. With each meal, in chronic cases. If not relieved this way, see your doctor.

Serve All-Bran as a cereal or use in muffins, breads, omelets, etc. In the red-and-green package. At all grocers. Made by Kellogg in London, Ontario.
